Kilkeel Town Walking & Heritage Trail

In 1740 Harris, in his History of County Down, described Kilkeel as "a small village and a church situated between the foot of the mountains of Mourne and the sea, in a narrow vale, which extends for some miles along the coast: the soil good, and the country well inhabited". Steeped in a strong industrial tradition of fishing, farming and granite, Kilkeel takes its name from the old church overlooking the town, it being the anglicised version of the Gaelic "Cill Choal" dating back to the 14th Century. Kilkeel is the principal town in the ancient Kingdom of Mourne.

Get your photograph taken at the Big Fish and visit the Mourne Seafarers Memorial which commemorates all those lost at Sea. It was sculpted by McConnell & Son, a renowned local granite firm that also made Lady Diana's Memorial Fountain, the National Memorial Arboretum and 9/11 Memorial Gardens in New York. The memorial was made out of one of the last large pieces of Mourne granite allowed to be quarried. Mourne granite was exported widely and the streets of Liverpool and Manchester were paved with it. The cast of TVs "Coronation Street" walk on Mourne granite sets. You can park in the Nautilus Centre Car Park and enjoy a walk around Kilkeel Harbour and also around Kilkeel Town Centre.

A marble figure representing a soldier with arms reversed stands on a granite base and marble pedestal. The unveiling ceremony was performed by the Rt Hon The Earl of Kilmorey and the Very Rev Major General Simms. Adjoining the church is a lecture hall which was opened originally as a school in 1853. This building is now used as a church hall. Turn left and continue on Greencastle street.

of Commerce

Kilkeel Library was constructed in the early 1970s. The entrance to the library was the former site of the old Kilkeel Urban District Council Offices. The Urban District Council was abolished in the 1970s with the establishment of the Newry and Mourne District Council. A new Library is currently under construction and will be completed towards the end of 2013. (It is currently located in the Nautilus Centre, while construction is taking place in 2013.) Continue past the Fire Station towards the edge of the town.

at the top of the Rooney Road onto Newcastle Street.

This resulted in further growth and physical development at the harbour and in 1890 alone more than one third of all herring landed in Ireland came through Kilkeel. The first decades of the 20th Century brought the recession, but with the inception of motorised boats more powerful than any sail-assisted vessel, with seine nets, the decline was reversed. The 1970s saw a substantial extension of the harbour to the resident seals "Salt n Pepper" duck and dive around the harbour named after "Clondyke Rooney" up towards the town centre. Turn left ilkeel is home to the largest shing fleet in N Ireland. Most varieties of fish and shellfish are landed into the port. From a historical erspective, there were always fishermen in Kilkeel and the surrounding district and the fishing industry has the mainstay of the local economy. Steeped in a strong history of being the Kingdom's principal fishing port, it is hard to imagine that for three quarters of the 19th Century Annalong boasted a far superior port t was not until the late 19t Century that, following the erection of a small pier and dock, Kilkeel proved to be location to land catches and

13. Parochial House/Oratory/St Colman's

on the Newry Road. St Colman's Hall, positioned beside the Oratory, was once the parish centre for concerts, dances and drama up until recent years. It is now used as a youth facility. St Colman's School replaced Dunavan School on the Newry Road in 1963. The boys and girls schools amalgamated in 1989. Continue onwards and opposite St Colman's Primary is the entrance to the former Mourne Abbey

14. Mourne Abbey

It dwindled over the next 10 years. There was originally a graveyard behind the house; however this has been covered over the last century, leaving the last headstone which is now built into an outhouse wall. The inscription reads: "O'Harril – The Rev'd James O'Harril, born in Drumall Feb 27 1739 – departed June 10 1807". The old buildings were incorporated soon after into the house of Quinn Henry who was agent to the Kilmorey Estate. This Victorian house is presumably the "delightful summer residence" referred to in the "Picturesque Handbook" (1846).

into the town centre. You will pass the Danske Bank on your left on Greencastle Street, formerly The Northern Bank, which is a Victorian house and was previously the Belfast Bank establishe in 1868. The First Trust Bank also situated on Greencastle Street, was formerly the Provincial Bank which amalgamated with the Munster and Leinster Bank in the early 1900s. It is on the site of two former cottages. The Munster and Leinster Bank was formerly situated in the building adjoining Christ Church House which was built in the 1920s. The Bank of Ireland is located at 19 Greencastle Street.

The United Brethren Meetin louse on Newcastle Street now the Alfred Eadie Hall was originally a Moravian Church until 1916. It was erected in 1832 and its foundation stone with the inscription "Church of the United Brethren 1832" is buil into the porch of the present day manse. It was then used as a church hall by Kilkeel Presbyterian Church, which is further down Newcastle Street beside the Sea Shell Centre. The church was formed by the Secession Presbytery of Markethill in 1822. The present church eplaced an older building at the end of the 19th Century. In recent years it has undergone extensive renovations and had a steeple added.

4. Site of The Old Temperance Hotel

he current Sea Shell Centre (beside the Kilkeel Presbyterian Church) on Newcastle Street was the former site of the old emperance Hotel where Percy French used to stay on his many visits to Kilkee As noted, Percy French also frequented the home of Dr and Mrs Samuel Floyd on Knockchree Avenue. Percy French is famous for writing "Where the Mountains of Mourne Sweep Down to the Sea"

5. Site of The Old Royal Hotel, Bridge Street

n the 1830s the Police Barracks was located on the site with six policemen. The uilding was then renovated and extended by "Clondyke Rooney" who was a well known beneficiary of the early US Goldrush at Clondyke.

The building traded as "The oyal Hotel ̈́ up until the mid 1980s when it was burned in a fire and remained derelict up until 2000 when it was redeveloped into commercial, retail and office premises. Across the road is the Old

6. The Old Church of St Colman's and Graveyard

The Old Church of St Colmans, Bridge Street, Kilkeel

Within the grounds of the church there is a defaced equal armed medieval cross, which stands beside a granite socket stone, which was traditionally used as a wart well for curing warts

A detailed historical description of the tradition, folklore and structure of the church and surrounding graveyard are available on the interpretive boards in the graveyard

There is also a memorial to the Connemara arepsilon Retriever Maritime Disaster when 94 souls were lost on the 3rd November 1916 in Carlingford Lough. If the graveyard is locked call into Spot On Toy Shop just down the hill from the Graveyard and they will give you the key. Head back down the street and cross over the old granite bridge and you will see the Lower Square on your left.

The Sculpture "Narrows Journey" was erected in 1998 and depicts the rich heritage and culture of the fishing, farming and granite industries in Mourne. There are public toilets available here. Continue up towards the traffic lights and straight onto Greencastle Street.

8. Kilmorey Square

The Old Courthouse, Kilkeel

At the top of Knockchree venue is the Kilmorey Arms Hotel which ha provided lodgings and accommodation since before Market House and Court House were also situated at the top of the present day Knockchree Avenue where a market was held every Wednesday and fair held or the first Tuesday of every quarter

Long cars and horse drawn coaches once collected and deposited passengers from the Court House and offices. With the arrival of motorised buses, Norton & Co Bus Depot was situated in one of these buildings. The Court House was also a neutral meeting place where "Penny Readings" concerts and dances took place in the 1800s and early 1900s. The Market House was demolished in 1952. Kilmorey Square was recently improved as part of a major Environmental Improvements Scheme to the town in 1999 and is the location of an old watering trough which dates back to the 1800s.

The trough was a gift to the town by Ellen Constance Lady Kilmorey and was originally situated at the corner of the Harbour Road and Bridge Street. It was used by cattle, horses and sheep until the 1960s when it was removed to its present site. A memorial statue was erected just below Kilmorey Square in 1999.

9. Knockchree Avenue

When the Courthouse was emoved and Knockchree Avenue constructed, it leads you to Kilkeel High School nd the Mourne Esplanade where the Leisure Centre and 5wimming Pool are located Kilkeel High School, which was constructed in 1953, is situated on the Avenue The High School is one of three secondary schools in Kilkeel St Louis Grammar School and St Columban's College. Percy French, the prolific writer of songs, including the internationally renowned and loved "The Mountains of Mourne", paid private visits to the home of Dr and Mrs Samuel Floyd who used to live in what is now 18 Knockchree Avenue.

now in shops fronts but the upper floors are all Georgian-glazed. The house was the former home of Dr Adderly. Get your picture taken at the Kilkeel Sculpture at the Steps. It was designed by local school children and erected as part of a regeneration project in 2011, when the new street lamps and pavements were refurbished. Turn left up

17. The Church of Christ

The Church of Christ the Redeemer, Church of reland was consecrated n the year 1815. It stand etween Newry Street and Iountain Road. It has been considerably improved since t first opened. Tablets in the church include one to the soldier and explorer General Francis Rawdon Chesney of Packolet House, Ballyardle. He was born at Ballyveagh Annalong in 1789 and died at Packolet just outside Kilkeel in 1872.

He devoted the last 20 years of his life to literary and scientific pursuits, including the furtherance of the great project of the Euphrates line to India and the surveyance of the feasibility of the Suez Canal which now links the Mediterranean with the Red Sea.

He is buried in the cemetery at Christ Church. The graveyard also contains graves of many other local notables, including the Kilmorey family and Robert Scott (d 1961) who won a VC in the Boer War. Continue up the hill and you will see the remains of the Mourne Hospital behind the Police Station.

primary school (Mourne Higher Grade School) from 1918-1925, and then as a technical school until the new college building was built on Greencastle Street. The building was also used by the RUC "A" Specials as a barracks in the early 1920s and by Dr Barnardos House during the 1940s. At the rear of the workhouse and hospital are the "Burying Banks" which mark the site of many unmarked graves of paupers and workhouse inmates. William Hare one of the infamous Edinburgh Grave Robbers, spent his last days there and is buried in an unmarked grave.

If you continue out the Newry Road then you will pass the former St Louis Grammar School was founded in 1921. It was previously known as [hornmount" which was owned by McClymot who had sawmills there. Additions were made to the school in 1973 There is an old fort behind the school which is of rich archaeological interest.

21. St Colman's Roman Catholic Church

he Church of St Colman Massforth) is the Romar Catholic Church which stands about a mile fron Kilkeel on the Newry side of the town. It is close by the Mass Rock used in the Penal days and replaced an earlier small chapel. I was completed in 1879 replacing an older building dated 1810, and was designed by architect John O'Neill & Byrne. The church was erected through the dedication of the Very Rev Richard Marner DDPP VF who was born in the parish of Kilmore 1834. Mr Marner was Professor and President of St Malachy's College Belfast (1857-1876) and Parish Priest of Upper Mourne (1885-1906). He also led the building of the Church at Atticall; Parochial House and Hall on Greencastle Street, Kilkeel; St Colman's; Star of the Sea and Atticall Schools. He died in 1906.

In the field behind the cemetery there is a "Kistavaen" or "Giants Grave" which is of significant archaeological interest.

Head back into town and retrace your steps back to the top of the Rooney Road. You will see the large ASDA store and its car park to the rear. If you walk up the lane at the Car Park you will see the Cromlech Dolmen in the hedge. Please be aware that this is a private lane.

22. Other Ecclesiastical Associations

he recently constructed aptist Tabernacle stands at the edge of the town on Newcastle Road. The former tabernacle, which stood on an elevated site opposite where the new structure is positioned, was built in 1933.

The Brethren have their meeting house on the Mountain Road. The original meeting house was built in 1932.

here is also a Brethren Meeting House on Newcastle Street. The Mourne Free Presbyterian Church is on the outskirts of Kilkeel on the Newcastle side of the town on the Carginagh Road.
